SÃO BRÁS DE ALPORTEL

São Brás de Alportel is one of the larger towns, surrounded by Tavira, Olhão, Faro and Loulé. In the 19th century, the village became an important economic centre due to its cork oak plantations. These plantations encouraged commercial development and made the village the largest producer of cork in Portugal and the world. São Brás de Alportel is in a privileged area, surrounded by woods and mountains, offering a spectacular view of the sea and the surrounding region. Property prices are, compared to the coastal towns, more competitively priced. Similar to Moncarpacho, São Brás has a very active and international community. The association of the Museum is the driving force within the town that brings residents of all nationalities together to perform music or paint.
